Adriana Belletti is Professor of Linguistics at the University of Siena. Her main research has focused over the years on generative comparative morpho-syntax and on different modes of language acquisition – monolingual, bi/multilingual, adult and child-L2 – and forms of language pathologies within a grammar-based approach. She is the author of several publications, including the 2015 volume with Maria Teresa Guasti The Acquisition of Italian. Morphosyntax and its interfaces in different modes of acquisition, Language Acquisition and Language Disorders series /LALD series, John Benjamins Publishing Company, and the 2021 volume Smuggling in Syntax, co-edited with Chris Collins for which they wrote a joint introduction and independent chapters, recently published in the Oxford Series in Comparative Syntax.

Some of her representative publications include:
- Structures and Beyond. The Cartography of Syntactic Structures, vol.3. (editor and introduction), 2004, Oxford University Press
- Structures and Strategies, 2009, Routledge Leading Linguists series
- The Acquisition of Italian (with Maria Teresa Guasti), 2015, John Benjamins Publishing Company
- Smuggling in Syntax (with Chris Collins), 2021, Oxford University Press
- “The Case of Unaccusatives”, Linguistic Inquiry, 19, 1, 1988, pp.1-34
