Main activities and responsibilities	His teaching (both at M.Sc. and PhD level) and research expertise are in the fields of entrepreneurship, Technology Transfer (TT), innovation management, information technologies (IT) and organizational theory. In particular, his research interests include the following topics: 1) the role of IT in transforming existing value chains and changing the value creation and value appropriation dynamics; 2) the role and the use of IT in transforming firms' organizational configurations and their relationships with management and strategy, also in the perspective of the so-called Industry 4.0 paradigm; 3) the changing role of TT practices and entrepreneurship education in fostering innovation in universities. In covering this last topic, his research takes advantage of being responsible of the CLab project funded by MIUR and member of the Cesaer task force on innovation. His research on IT has contributed to bridge a knowledge gap on the inter-sectoral differences in the patterns of IT use and on the effect of IT-based innovation on competitive dynamics. Such works raised important policy-making implications on how to allocate public funds to firms to sustain their digitalization process; they also contributed to a better understanding of the reasons behind the productivity gap between EU and the USA. His research on this matter has been conducted also with the "Business and Information Technology Research Network" led by UCLA, and contributed to the permanent research program on the diffusion of the Information Society supported by the Piedmont regional government. He is author of over 100 articles published in peer reviewed international journals, book chapters and conferences, co-author of 2 international patents and he cooperates with international universities (i.e. UCLA - Anderson School of Management) on various education programs. As a reviewer, he contributed to ISI-indexed international journals such as International Journal of Production and Operation Management, Information & Management, International Journal of Information Management. He had responsibility of research projects funded by EU (within different FPs), public institutions and large companies. In 2005 Emilio Paolucci co-founded Electro Power Systems (now NHOA - https://nhoa.energy), a company awarded with the "National Innovation Prize" in Italy, selected in 2012 as "Technology Pioneer" by the World Economic Forum (https://www.weforum.org/agenda/2011/09/in-the-name-of-my-team-and-the-world-economic-forum-i-am-proud-to-present-the-25-entrepreneurial-companies-chosen-as-technol/), and included in 2012 in the "Global Cleantech 100" list as a global technological leader in fuel cell power systems for stationary applications and energy storage.
