Valentina Sommella is Assistant Professor of History of International Relations. She teaches East Asian History and Culture and Global Governance and International Organizations. Before joining the Department of Political Science at the University of Perugia, she taught History of International Relations at La Sapienza University of Rome and was Visiting Research Fellow at University College Dublin. Her main research interests lie in the foreign policy of liberal Italy; Italian foreign policy in the interwar years; relations between the Allies during and after WWII; and, more recently, the rise of China as a global power in the international system. She has participated in several research projects and has published three monographs and numerous essays in international journals, among them Un console in trincea. Carlo Galli e la politica estera dell’Italia liberale, 1905-1922 (Soveria Mannelli: Rubbettino, 2016); Dalla non belligeranza alla resa incondizionata. Le relazioni politico-diplomatiche italo-francesi tra Asse e Alleati (Rome: Aracne, 2008); Un’alleanza difficile. Churchill, de Gaulle e Roosevelt negli anni della guerra (Rome: Aracne, 2005).
